1. Write two essential elements of a successful project.

2. Put the stages in the correct problem-solving order: a) Discover, b) Define, c) Develop, d) Deliver.

() Now that we have lots of information about the problem, we take everything we learned and narrow it down into one single specific problem.

() In this stage, we learn everything we can about the problem. We explore the problem, research, talk to people, and find out how others solved similar problems.

() Time to choose the best idea and make it happen. In this stage, we build prototypes, test ideas, and evaluate the solution.

() With the problem defined, this is the stage where we focus on the solution and consider every possibility. Get ready to brainstorm: No idea is a bad idea!
